Expects to stay in Wrentham until the first of July, then will attend the annual meeting of the Plymouth County Anti-Slavery S[illegible]y. To Samuel Edmund Sewall.

[No pl.] The writer, gratified by the "mild Phrenological spirit" of the addressee's note, wishes the opposition in his first communication not to be considered personal. Explains that he considers slavery in the abstract an evil, but interference with slavery in the Southern states equally wrong and "on an infinitely greater scale." Not wishing to have the addressee removed from the Sabbath School, the writer suggests having his son "ask permission of his teacher to retire, whenever Antislavery is to be 'inflicted'."

:Haverhill, (Mass.): Is delighted with the success of W.L.G.'s mission to England. Says that an Anti-Slavery society will be organized in Haverhill. Wants to know if S. J. Wishes to go to Philadelphia to urge the Quakers to take up the cause of Abolition, but cannot afford it. Missed being nominated for state senator by one vote. Recommends that W.L.G. call on B. L. To Mrs. Maria (Weston) Chapman

«Mount Pleasant, near Woburn, Bedfordshire, England» The writer encloses several contributions for the Liberty Bell in response to a note transmitted by Richard D. Webb of Dublin. The writer asked for contributions from several people, all of whom responded. Not having received the copy sent him, he does not know if the Liberty Bell is limited to the subject of slavery. Advocates the value of "the peaceful amenities of literature."

A.L.S. 3 p. 9 x 5 5/8 in.

In a postscript the writer says that he heard the American Abolitionists praised in Sp[illegible] by Antonio Bengnes de las Casas of Barcelona, husband of [illegible]scendant of Bartolomé de las Casas, friend of the Caribb[illegible]ndians.

To "My dear Friend"

:Edinburgh, (Scotland). The writer hopes to see the addressee before she recrosses the Atlantic. "We expect Mary Webb to take tea with us tomorrow evening." Says that William and Robert Chambers are publishing Anti-Slavery articles in their journal. Mentions the "African Twins, two girls 5 1/2 yrs old united together by the backbone." Does not think that these Siamese twins should be exhibited, even though the money gained thereby will be used to purchase their freedom from slavery. Thinks that this money should be paid into the treasury of the American Anti-Slavery Society.

The exhibition of the contributions had more visitors than any previous one; "hundreds came each of the two days ..." This exhibition conflicted with the Anti-Slavery Bazaar of the "New Christian Association" and was blamed for the latter's small success.
